We seek out the best new offerings from innovative designers around the world.

DINO CLOTHES RACK SYSTEM

Clothes racks aren't generally the most exciting of objects – they can be found up there on the style scale somewhere between gumboots and can openers – so imagine our surprise when we found one we liked the look of.

Designed by Ugandan Lincoln Kayiwa (now residing in Finland), the DINO clothes rack is attractive and functional, with different sized hangers for all sized coats. Ideal for the home, the office or for public spaces, coat checking is a breeze thanks to the numbered hangers.

With a look that's part clean and simple, part storm-trooper's bedroom furniture, the DINO will fit in among the most colourful or minimal environment. The hangers' gentle undulation has a soothing feel; the ideal substitute to sheep counting on a restless night. www.kayiwa.fi

NOW ISN'T THAT LOVELY?

Like looking at a bunch of Beatrix Potter characters after eating the wrong kind of mushrooms, Stephen Johnson's Now Isn't That Lovely? sculptures propose a surreal Alice in Wonderland world of escape. Observe rabbits twice the size of dogs floating among giant candies and mini hearts. Teddies make friends with ducks, mice share their dinner with dogs and happy snails wear pretty bows. www.stephenjohnson.biz
